Obama calls GMA on VFA

HELLO THERE US President Obama surprise President Arroyo on Saturday

Lauds her efforts vs terrorism

By TJ Burgeles

US PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA MADE A SURPRISE telephone call to President Macapagal-Arroyo early yesterday morning (Friday night in the United States) to reaffirm his country's alliance with the Philippines and its commitment to the controversial Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA).

Palace officials, startled by the gesture that followed a series of failed attempts by Ms. Arroyo to meet with the US President, could not help but praise that it was the latter who sought her aid.

"They reaffirmed their commitment to the long-standing US-Philippine alliance, including the VFA which remains critical to the bilateral relationship and our strategic interests," Press Secretary Gregg Bernades said, quoting from a White House statement.

Obama also "commended President Arroyo for her country's efforts in countering terrorism, and welcoming the Armed Forces," Bernades said, still quoting from the statement.

"The two leaders discussed the need to work closely together on the global economic crisis as well as on other areas of common concern, including climate change, education, and interfaith dialogue," he said.

Bernades broke the news in the middle of an interview with the government-run Radyo ng Bayan. He said he had received a call from Foreign Secretary Alberto Romulo, who expressed "satisfaction" and "positive feelings" over the two Presidents' telephone conversation. "The (Romulo) considers this a very important development in the

No boardroom bloodbath over Meralco

By Davis C. Dumalan and Elizabeth Sanchez-Lacson

THOSE ANTICIPATING A "BATTLE OF THE Titans" over Manila Electric Co. will not be seeing any blood in the boardroom, top officials of the two powerful vying blocs in the power distribution utility—Isa Miguel Corp. and Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co.—declared yesterday.

"We have no plans to take over Meralco. If we wanted to, we would have done it a long time ago. We had no plans then and we have no plans now," said Isa Miguel president Ramon Ang.

Isa Miguel will not fight the PLDT group led by Manuel V. "MVP" Pangilinan for control of Meralco, said Ang.

"We will leave it up to MVP to run the company," he said.

But neither will Isa Miguel sell out of Meralco, Ang said, insisting that the fixed and broadband conglomerate, which is diversifying into infrastructure and heavy industry, is investing in the power utility "for the long term."

We are in a good place to survive global crisis

FILIPINOS ARE IN EXCELLENT position to survive and to grow out of this global economic crisis.

Fundamentally, our economy is resilient, buoyed by a spirit of self-empowerment and resourcefulness.

We are in a place where people find ways to get by and even prosper, and only the minority depend on government. It's a place where the great majority depend mainly on themselves and thrive on hard work, perseverance, self-sacrifice and a

Glass ceiling exists no more for RP women

By Abigail L. Ho

FILIPINO WOMEN ARE SHOWING THE world that what men can do, they can also do.

According to research by Grant Thornton International, women hold 47 percent of senior management positions in the Philippines, leading the world average by as much as 23 percentage points.

"Women in the Philippines have truly broken the proverbial glass ceiling, not only in the corporate world but also in the government," said Lily Livingston, Partner-In-Charge at Manila-based PwC.

"No one doubts that more than 25 years, we have not encountered an all-male management team in our own firm, eight of the 18 partners and five of the senior members of the management committee are women," Livingston said.

Data from the Department of Labor and Employment shows that women have steadily outnumbered men in executive positions in the past several years.

In 2002, the ratio was 1.48 million females to 1.4 million males in supervisory and executive positions, the (2002) said.

Life of luxury detailed in Madoff's court papers

NEW YORK—COURT documents show that Bernard Madoff and his wife Ruth lived a life of high luxury with exclusive homes, yachts and other assets worth $623 million.

The revelations come in documents filed with the US Court of Appeals, which is due on March 19 to hear Madoff's appeal to be granted bail. He was jailed on Thursday after pleading guilty to a multi-billion-dollar investment fraud. (Related story in World, Page A22.)

The documents, filed by Madoff's lawyers Friday, show the Wall Street boss and his wife had $20 million worth of real estate at the end of 2008.

This includes the $7-million Manhattan apartment where Madoff lived from his arrest in December to Thursday's court hearing, where he pleaded guilty to 11 counts including fraud, property, money laundering and theft.

Lawyers for Madoff, 70, argue that he should be allowed back there on bail while he waits for his June 16 sentencing hearing. He is expected to receive a lengthy prison sentence, with a maximum term of 150 years.

Prelate: Bro. Mike sought backing

By Desi T. Padilla

A BISHOP LEADER of the Catholic Church has revealed that the 11th Manila Archbishop, Bro. Mike, has sought backing for his proposal to run for the presidency in 2010.

Upon Archbishop Francisco Argüelles' call, the highly popular self-styled crusader tried to get his endorsement when they met by chance in Batangas.

"He told me in passing he would be willing to run if I've chosen him. And he was sincere," said Argüelles in an interview post on the Philippine Daily Inquirer website.

The archbishop said he just learned and told Venerable: "You know we're not allowed to do this."

The CBCP as an organization does not officially endorse candidates, a position recently reiterated by CBCP president Jovenaldo "Neng" Lagda.

With a following mentioned in the columns, Mike's own endorsement is reportedly sought by political candidates.

But in recent interviews, Venerable dropped hints he himself might not be president.

Later work, the 65-year-old leader of the 11th Manila archdiocese would run for president if he received the support of the country's Catholic bishops.

Argüelles said it was not within Venerable's rights to run for public office, but he added he would prefer it if Venerable remained as spiritual leader of the Church.

1st Reading: Gen 22:1-14
And after all these words, the angel of the Lord said to Abraham, "I know you are afraid of the Lord, but you have not yet been tested. Now we will test you, Abraham. Say to your servants, 'Put the wood on the altar, and lay Isaac on it, and then go and sacrifice him to the Lord.'"

2nd Reading: Heb 11:17-19
By faith Abraham, when he was tested, offered up Isaac, his only son; and he who had received the promise of God, offered up his only son, because he considered that God was able to raise him even from the dead. He also considered that since he had seen God, he was bound to offer him up, because he had seen that God was able to raise him even from the dead.

THE JOURNEY CONTINUES.

150 Years. The Ateneo Way.

On June 14, 1859, ten Jesuits returned to Philippine soil after almost a century of absence. It would be the beginning of a journey that continues today, 150 years later.

On June 14, 2009, the Ateneo de Manila University will officially launch its Sesquicentennial Celebration with an event that traces the University's history through six campuses and four cities in Metro Manila.

Let us honor a tradition of reaching new heights of excellence, deepening spirituality and building the nation.

Join us as we celebrate Ateneo history—the Ateneo way.

We invite all alumni, friends and partners to join the Ateneo community in the celebration!

Barack also called Indonesian, Saudi, Argentinian leaders

WASHINGTON—US PRESIDENT BARACK Obama telephoned, not only President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, but also the leaders of Indonesia, Saudi Arabia and Argentina, on Friday night to discuss working together on the world's economic crisis, causing oil to rise.

Obama will also see three other leaders—President Nicolas Sarkozy of France, King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia and President Cristina Fernandez of Argentina—on the global financial matters, in the first week month in London.

Islamic countries
The White House said Obama's contact with the Indonesian President was focused on education, healthcare, climate change, counterterrorism and trade.

The two leaders also discussed Obama's commitment to forging a new relationship with Islamic countries. On the end of his Damascus trip next month, Obama is scheduled to visit Saudi Arabia, a Muslim nation where relations with the United States were strained by the 2002 invasion of Iraq. He also has pledged to deliver a major speech in a Muslim nation early in his presidency.

They also talked about how to make progress on democracy and human rights in Iran (Myanmar).

Peace and security
Obama and Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, another G-20 country and longtime US ally in the Middle East, spoke about coordinating international efforts to contain transmogrific growth.

The White House said they also agreed on the importance of maintaining a strong US-Israeli relationship to promote peace and security in the region.

Obama spokeswoman Michelle Obama said the President discussed with Argentina's President the upcoming London meeting and how to work together to reinvigorate the global financial system.
They also talked about how to support a successful summit of the Americas in April, to be held in Trinidad and Tobago.

Obama thanked Fernandez for Argentina's leadership in Latin America and the region and for its efforts to bring stability to Haiti, Myanmar and

Obama calls GMA on VFA

Relationship between the two countries, especially since the Obama administration, has been solid.

"The Secretary of State wanted to meet the last day that I was President Obama was visiting President Garcia," he said.

Talks ease

Sen. Francis Pangilinan worried administration officials against using Obama's support for the VFA as a reason to back the two-sided implementation of the agreement.

"There is no doubt to suggest that they support US interests more than they do our," Pangilinan, who has filed a resolution in the Senate asking the abrogation of the VFA on economic grounds, said in a press release.

"Obama support for the VFA is expected considering that the many have US laws with more than it does our interests," he said.

The VFA, which governs the conduct of American troops engaged in joint military operations with the US military, is critical to support from an American House member of support for the VFA.

The House member said on Feb. 11 that the VFA is a "disaster" and that he will vote against the VFA. He said the VFA is a "disaster" and that he will vote against the VFA.

negotiation, sparking a fever and prompting calls for a review of the VFA, its so-called abrogation.

More time

Pangilinan wanted time to discuss the VFA with the Philippine President. He said he would like to see the VFA in a more realistic light.

"I believe that the US has been too quick to look at the large role of the United States in our country. Maybe we have been too quick to look at the large role of the United States in our country. Maybe we have been too quick to look at the large role of the United States in our country."

The US President's support call came a month after the House made an attempt to end two-day working visit to the United States on several the National Defense Budget in Washington, an attempt gathering of US Congress members, and possibly more with him.

That failed attempt was preceded by an effort to amend the law last year.

US Congress also tried to designate Obama as an American, but he was not and he will not make law.

Not ending

The senator's Philippine ally, Sen. Antonio Trillanes, said that the VFA is a "disaster" and that he will vote against the VFA.

"Obama is not helping the Philippines. He is not helping the Philippines. He is not helping the Philippines."

one in the US who voted for him for his promise to pull out US troops from Iraq and end US military intervention and aggression in other countries. The new White House is looking for a support of the VFA, the senator's assistant, Francisco Tirona, said in a statement.

Francisco Tirona said he was not sure if Obama's Philippine ally was a friend of the VFA, or whether the new US President, in making the call about ending US troops in Iraq, was in fact saying that Obama's relations could be affected by a Philippine move to abrogate the agreement.

But according to Pangilinan, the House should not allow the VFA to be passed simply by the new administration, as previously considered and proposed three past years in the House. Pangilinan said the VFA should be passed by the House.

Victory

Pangilinan, a Harvard University law school, said the two Presidents were "in" to the VFA. He said the VFA is a "disaster" and that he will vote against the VFA.

RP has second-dirtiest seas, report says

By Alain Pags

THE PHILIPPINES RANKS SECOND in the world for the most trash recovered from its shores, an international conservation group has revealed.

The World Ocean Conservancy reported that 1,555,226 tons of trash were recovered from the country's shoreline, most of which was collected during the International Coastal Cleanup conducted by the group in September 2008, involving nearly 65,000 volunteers around the world.

The results of the cleanup were presented in a report by the group titled "A Rising Tide of Ocean Debris" which was released on March 10 and is available on the group's website.

Topping the list of trash items were plastic bags (379,857 pieces), paper bags (223,053) and food wrappers (181,250). Also recovered were 38,794 pieces of clothing and shoes, 35,814 tobacco-related items including cigarette butts (34,134), lighters and ashtrays, and 31,027 diapers.

The United States topped the list of countries with the most trash recovered with 3,943,803 items. It had plastic bags (1,075,593 items).

Ocean Conservancy said it collected 11.4 million pieces of trash from 5,485 sites in 104 countries, including the Philippines.

Ocean connection
 "We are all connected to the ocean. The cleanest oceans are the most vibrant in this way, bringing beaches and sailing up on the sea floor affects the coast and all the living things in it," the report said.

"Marine debris is more than a nuisance on beaches, it is a potential threat to our food supply, to tourism and economic activity, to marine wildlife and ecosystems, and to our personal health, it even affects the climate change," it added.

Because of the study, local waste and pollution watchdogs Beachwatch Coalition called on the public to help restore the health of Philippine waters.

On World Environment Day today (March 16), the coalition called for more awareness, responsibility and action to keep the oceans and waters, particularly from plastic garbage.

"Our sign board and national authorities to fully enforce Republic Act No. 8903, or the Ecological Solid Waste Management Act, to stop the dumping of trash in the oceans and waters that eventually find their way into the marine ecosystem," said Henry Calalang, Beachwatch Coalition president.

To prevent garbage from entering the marine environment, the coalition urged consumers to adopt green practices (ecological waste management), including water conservation, reduction, separation of wastes, recycling, reuse and composting.

Poverty plagues

In 2006, the group together with Greenpeace conducted a joint disaster survey of Manila Bay which showed that 76 percent of the garbage in the bay was made of plastic and 31 percent was plastic bags, Calalang said.

The coalition also urged the Department of Environment and Natural Resources and National Solid Waste Management Commission to do something about the trash in the ocean.

"The President has chosen Jun Matiniano," Executive Secretary Eduardo Bernaldo said in a photo-release.

Lozada was former deputy for legal affairs.

Matiniano began to sign Lozada's appointment papers. He reported to Matiniano in this week, Bernaldo said.

"Lozada, he's being succeeded for the position. I just can't confirm it until his appointment papers are out," he said.

Matiniano retired on Thursday, amid charges he took bribes from a group of companies owned by the late legacy group of companies owned by Carlos de los Angeles. The company folded, leaving over 50,000 plus holders empty-handed.

Been there before

Lozada himself, however, is no stranger to controversy.

Last year, he admitted giving half a million pesos to Rodolfo "Doy" Lozada Jr. reportedly to help the former economic planning consultant pay for his expenses in Hong Kong and avoid being charged in court.

In the lawsuit, he is charged with conspiracy to take bribes from a group of companies owned by the late legacy group of companies owned by Carlos de los Angeles. The company folded, leaving over 50,000 plus holders empty-handed.

He's very qualified

"There was nothing corrupt," Bernaldo said with Lozada, and Bernaldo is director of GMA.

"He's very qualified... he's been deputy executive secretary for legal affairs for a long time. He comes up to him for final resolution, for orders, for final action and review," Bernaldo added.

In a radio interview, Bernaldo said the President "had made her choice" on Matiniano's replacement.

"I have to admit that a choice has been made, but he's not the one for the moment," he said over government radio.

"I neither confirm nor deny that," he said when asked if the choice was Lozada.

Endangered giant clams lost, found

By Nita Cecilia Rodriguez
 Anwar, Marawi, Philippines

A MAJOR SANCTUARY IN THE Atapukan Bay off Jasaan town in Mindanao's Davao del Norte province has been found and opening doors to more 100 giant clams in about a decade.

Discovered by experts in saving the most species who lost due the most widespread sea overfishing, the giant clams were not listed and used for biological information about their important role in marine biodiversity.

It was in 2001 when from Davao del Norte in Palawan, the clams were brought to the Agaña White Island, a 1.14-hectare marine sanctuary in Jasaan. They were protected and more than 100 giant clams were found.

"They were like babies being transferred from one parent to another. They were handled so very carefully, and we used to think like we were actually raising children," said Dr. Hilo Anonuevo, head of the Mindanao Marine Center in Jasaan University. He said the center has a project to protect and promote the giant clams.

Missing clams

The Agaña clams are not of spawning age, more than a century long and weighing at least 10 kilograms.

"The size of it is one of the most successful breeding projects for giant clams in the country because the survival rate has been very high," said Quirino, a marine biologist and expert in LOCAL environmentalists who were instrumental in the Agaña white island marine sanctuary in Jasaan, Mindanao. When the clams were first brought to the sanctuary, they were only 100 clams. Now they are more than 100 giant clams and have grown to be 20 kilograms. (Anwar, Marawi, Philippines) giant clams. Over the years, a locally and quarterly monitoring and inventory has been conducted by researchers from private groups and institutions related to environmental protection. Fisheries and marine, however, except the environmentalists who have been able to find at least 100 giant clams not seen in the area.

According to Quirino, the clams, mostly 100 to 150 cm, a "Bakay Daga" and have a period that lasted from one hour to two days and served as a sign of a storm.

"The giant clams that he would see go into the boat because the storm was high and that he was also used for his life," said Quirino, who is responsible for the sanctuary's safety.

Telling officials of Jasaan, which protects Agaña, also reported the missing clams to the MIMC records book in a form on Feb. 15. "The water was only 10 cm deep. It was for the 10 cm, we could not have been a 10 cm," Quirino said.

Quirino was immediately raised and volunteers from the Society of Environmental Education (SEE) for Mindanao and other environmental groups launched a search for the missing clams.

Quirino said he had been looking for giant clams in the area for a long time, but he did not find a single specimen in the area.

Quirino, in staff of protected marine resources, has long spent time for the world's giant clams which are not only protected and moved. However, it is already under guard, a giant clam is caught and "quarantined," it cannot be sold in the market nor displayed in public.

Raring to return to Iraq, for ban to be lifted

By Mrs Catherine Collaps

ALTHOUGH THE land may have been previously pounded by missile attacks and aerial strikes, Iraq is still regarded as a safe haven for many Filipinos seeking jobs overseas.

"Going down to Iraq is not dangerous," says Mrs. Catherine Collaps, a wife of a retired pilot, who is now in the Philippines.

The 34-year-old maintenance technician has worked in a construction company in Iraq for several years, and has been in Iraq for a total of 12 years. She says she is not afraid to go back to Iraq, and she is not afraid to go back to Iraq.

Romero backs out of Burger King

By Huang R. Castillo

ARMED ROMERO, THE BASKETBALL LOVING pro magazine, has ended what he called a "dream deal" to the Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) franchise of Burger King.

The owner of Manila Express in the amateur Philippine Basketball League (PBL) announced in a news statement that he is leaving the pro league because his "group" and the Burger King company did not come to terms.

Romero moved up to where the big boys local court after his being PBL with a draft straight into the PBA, either to the pros.

He joined the pro league as alternate governor of Burger King, which the PBA board had approved as replacement for A21 last year also owned by First Line.

The plan was for Romero and his co-owner, businessman magazine Manila Express, to buy Burger King from First Line out of the proceeds from the sale of Harbor Center to MVP.

Under the deal, Romero would become the majority owner by paying to make capital in the next three years through the Burger King franchise.

But reports said negotiations for the sale of Harbor Center bogged down, leading Romero to back out of the deal.

Romero actually was the team since January.

Texters topple Titans

By Huang R. Castillo

MINUTEMEN—THE YIN TEXT ROCKED the fortunes of Old River, hurling back from 23 points down to defeat Burger King, 117-114, yesterday in a PBA Fiesta Cup round game presented by the PBA at the Meralco Arena in Cebu.

After a 25-10 PBA round-high 38 points in the third period as the Topping team secured a second straight win for 3-2 in the series.

While, who also had 11 rebounds, scored on a left-handed layup with 31.4 seconds left to play to close the Titans ahead the yard, 114-113, and cap a seven-high score.

The Titans trailed out of a 35-14 hole without them, who was tossed out of the court with 3:12 left in the second quarter for physically assaulting referee Ray Cordero.

Burger King, with alternate board member Mike Romero literally hitting the main referee, started not but and scored to double-digit lead early.

The Titans scored 39 points right in the first period that resulted to that 39-36 lead early in the third period before Wade single shot along with the Titans, who finished with 123 points.

Wade nailed 3 and 7 attempts from three-point range in the third period.

Talk 'N Ten scored the lead for the first time at 10:04 through Jerald Cordero and other Titans led by as many as 18-0-0 after a Cordero 8-10, with 7:11 left.

The High Road Principle

A LEADER'S WAY

James C. Mazzurco

[illegible]

Let's face it, we all screw up from time to time. Each of us has quirks that our bosses can't be missing, and bad moments when we're just not pleased in the least.

People who value the high road recognize their businesses, know that they need to be respected, priced, and accordingly are more likely to extend a courtesy.

3) High modems are not victims. They choose to over-receive.

People who take the high road don't do so because it's the only available option. They do it as a by-product of other, less obvious, goals. When other work effort is taxed, instead, high roaders choose their path as a conscious act of service to others. By taking the high road, they drain animosity and tension out of relationships, setting in place their own and their organization's.

Moreover, in serving others, higher leaders usually themselves lose. As the author of Ikigai notes, "It is a man's glory to overlook an offense." When we naturally respond to a slight by showing bitterness, we display attitudes that cause those closest to us to lose the respect of others.

distributed as an infant, author James Michener never knew his biological parents. Fortunately, his surrogates in and raised by a widow, and he adopted her customs. However, each time James published a book, he inserted many names from a member of the Michener clan. The readers thus read James for talking to the Michener name, which this person like the novelist had no right to use.

Despite being treated, Michael did agree with our assessment: his relatives had made. "When do you think you are, trying to be better than you are?" he asked Michael's girlfriend. "I spend my life trying to be better than I was, and I am smarter to sit

PHILAM LIFE
The Largest Financial Group

By Marivic Gato Inquirer Business Team

MANILA CITY—ATD-68, which literally means "to slowly rebuild" in old Tagalog, is one organization's way of helping rebuild the families of migrant Filipino workers.

Believing that "investment" can be only financial concerns but also emotional and social issues, a group of migrant workers founded the Atidha (Caring Workers and Communities Initiative Inc.) in 1996.

The group chose to pilot the program in Laguna and Iloilo, as these provinces registered the most number of migrant workers.

In 2000, the organization conducted research on the families left behind by migrant Filipino workers (OFWs) and found the situation alarming, said founding member and executive director Benito Alonzo.

Quoting the Department of Social Welfare and Development, he said "abuse of power is a very real situation in the Philippines, at least there in Laguna, are children of OFWs."

Femaleization of migration

Alonzo's findings showed how the labor demand abroad had shifted from male laborers in the 1980s to domestic helpers, caregivers or nurses in Italy, Spain and Hong Kong in the 1990s.

The increased employment opportunities for women today are a result of what she called the growing feminization of migration.

She said most children found a difficult time with the "stepmother" when it is the mother, who normally takes up the "nurturing role" in the family, leaves to work abroad.

"This should not be the case, but reality does not condition husbands to cook, do the laundry or feed the kids," she said.

If there are some men who do, social pressures outside them are being "under the eye" or harassed.

Abandonment

Migrant's efforts also vary depending on how early the parents leave. If the children were still infants at the time the parents leave, the danger is one of abandonment.

There are cases where children left behind often refer to their mothers as "the" parent because they do not know them, said Alonzo.

On the other hand, children left behind during their teen years develop the feeling of abandonment because of the idea that parents left them for a better life abroad.

Communication gap

Alonzo conducts school-based workshops in 12 pilot schools at present to assess the relationship of the OFW to the family.

It has tapped at least 1,000 children of OFWs, aged 19 and above, for the workshops they conduct, she foundation each month.

One exercise involves drawing a "family tree"—where the children represent the son, and the other members of the family would represent other family members.

"In some cases, you'll find the mother on another page [of the paper] that shows how he [the son] is doing," Alonzo said.

Alonzo believes that lack of information on the real conditions abroad causes the gap.

Other times, she said, OFWs would not speak of their problems to keep their families from worrying. They also have the tendency to hardly send remittances and packages to ease the guilt of being physically present in the family.

During a recent workshop of Atidha in Iloilo, a group of 15 male domestic helpers were asked who among them still used letters to their families.

Out of 100 participants, only one raised his hand.

"I turned out that this OFW is the only one [among the participants] whose family is doing well and whose kids are better students... the ideal OFW lastly we can think of," said Alonzo.

"It is not the frequency but the quality of communication," she pointed out.

Emotional

"We as OFWs feel they are a father," said Alonzo.

The organization has domestic helper who worked in Hong Kong for 20 years.

"When she came back, she was asking me, 'Where I made the right decision to work abroad?' because she was able to have her house renovated and furnished, but none of her children finished college and her husband left her," Alonzo recalled.

Alonzo believes emotional problems are just as serious as financial problems. The feeling of abandonment or being a loved one is a matter that needs to be taken seriously as much as financial concerns.

In the same manner, Atidha also helps the family even, by giving this will to the new OFW needs to work away from the family.

Replication

Aside from the schools, Atidha taps local government, cooperatives, banks and micro-finance organizations to replicate the financial literacy program in OFWs.

"Normally, there is no particular program set for OFWs just because people think they are relatively well-off and needs no more help," Alonzo said.

The organization conducts workshops for OFWs and also manages the continuous (age, mother or sibling) in the Philippines.

They secure reliable cooperatives and banks in the country to "create an enabling environment" for the OFW from money when they come home.

"The challenge is to prepare the community to absorb the savings and investment of OFWs that will contribute to the local economic development," said Alonzo.

She believes international should not only begin during times of crisis, but as part of a long-term strategy.

NATIONAL BOOK STORE
OPENS ANOTHER CHAPTER WITH THE NEW GLORIETTA 5

FOR THE PATT Messrs. "Super Times" Acquires Some has worked over National Book Store. She opened her first store in the Apple Mall in 1971 and has been a very successful partner ever since.

AS THE WINGA MILLS CONTINUE TO BLAZA a trail of leadership in the retail sector, it continues to build new relationships with selected strategic partners who over time have proven to share the company's attitude for innovation and excellence in retail.

One of its most important retail partners is a great example to us all. It compels that this is a great track record of success and just over the years, but over the decades. Regardless of how long it has been in operation, you find commonality among businesses that all share of the same "LOOKING FOR THE BEST."

National Book Store is the preeminent bookstore in the country. Being the originator and modern personification of the Filipino bookstore concept, National Book Store can truly say, I DO store and sound. It is the only bookstore that caters to nationwide coverage and to be truly in the service of the Filipino wherever in the country the way he needed some help escaped from her children, but from the first appearance of her father as well.

Yvonne Anne Allington, a member of The Third generation, is in charge of the latest branch of National Book Store which is located in the heart of Miami at the new Glendale 5 shopping mall. Glendale 5 is the most prominent of Ayala Center's units. Storefronts, world-class retail and development plans are open to work and play, all within minutes of each other.

Almendinger adds that "But Slovákia does not always seem an important thing. It's not like we were designing the new Slovakia's flag, it was important for us to create a concept first and to keep with the thrust of the mail. The story has made open-designs, high ceilings and to conclude to create a sense of atmosphere that is conducive to browsing and will enhance the artist's shopping experience."

Marko Anagnostis, CEO of Agria Metals Group, adds that "these metals build solid foundations that have reached through generations. For over 25 years, National Book Store has supported and carried on as a leader in such a high-tech development. With the recent addition of Marquee, L.F. Agala Technologies and Gioletta S, shoppers can continue to expect the widest and largest book selections and offer supplies. As we progress to new retail phases of shopping center development, we look forward to years of stronger relationships with National Book Store as they join our experience and continue to innovate.

By providing the market with a wide selection of outlets at the lowest prices and the dependable selection of coffee and coffee supplies in a one-stop shop, it isn't surprising when you read that the Agua Mada Group always looks to National Book Store as an anchor tenant in all its developments. After all, they are strategic partners who have "grown up" together and survived all the challenges of the past years through their commitment to innovation and excellence.

Zobel scion opens...

What Zobel scion father is business-minded, one of the most influential business leaders, who remained for years in the family business to be a scion—just as he is on the right track.

Since last year, various media began reporting about affluent droppers after coming down on their spending on luxury in recent years, so as to appear to be in the middle of the family who have been hit hard by the financial crisis.

One line of current spending happens on business.

Challenge

"There are not a lot of people up on being fashionable and making you feel," Zobel says. "While before, some women could go for the more expensive items, now there's a market tendency toward buying more, or will check other retailers for better prices. People have always used fashion as a kind of way of expressing themselves, and to credit credit buying to change that."

What the Zobel scion's challenge is in maintaining a secure and efficient estate structure that would suit his own needs, and the needs of the present and future.

"The lack of a nation-wide credit information system or an efficient delivery system also limits the ability of many data-facile markets to expand rapidly in this sector. In the important question is, even if online shopping is the only way to increase sales, would they reduce purchases from an online store based in the US and Europe that he is in?

"This scion is currently important for us to do this right. He and only he can think about getting the right business online, but we should also position building the right person that will make potential buyers that can see the value, and deliver with an immediate response.

Zobel, who moved in London and around the successful Manila peninsula as his business model, says that the scion will be passed down to the 13th generation, "a legacy" and "a legacy" of the Zobel family.

His scion is also one of the scion, not a scion by appointment, but a scion by choice. "I want to see if they make the sale simply because their products are so trendy today?"

Happily married woman reconnects with old flame

DANIEL M. SCHMIDT

I am a 44-year-old happily married woman. I am very healthy. In a recent health checkup, a female doctor showed up in my pants.

The new board is minding company and he proposed that the board list of his workers in the industry, the supply and that maintain for any products to give them supplementary income.

Last month, he brought the workers' union to meet with me. Later, he invited me to lunch and, despite my prohibitions, he charmed me into lunch.

He mentioned about old ideas and how he could have proposed meetings to me, were he not so below me financially. In short, he insisted that business was just an excuse to get and talk to me.

After several meetings, I realized I still have feelings for him.

EMILY'S POST

A. Hareyda

Should I go through with the deal for compensation?

CMI

What you're asking is, is it advisable to go through with the business proposal and associated with him?

What's the deal? He obviously seems to have a great design on you. Get your girlfriend the camera, the clothes, and not stick your "baggy" shorts?

What mainly is the client? Married? Separated? Divorcing? With children?

Psychiatric and neurological inment are always readily available, especially reconnecting with old friends. You wake up with a song in your head. While there are wonderful close friendships forged after marriage, are you certain you are "happily married" enough to be just friends with him?

If you DON'T have emotional issues, you could have just put him in your drawer and be done with him. But sticking out to me only means there are many negative objects in your mind.

Think hard, think deep. You've declared yourself a happily married woman. Are you really so happy?

Welcome to the riot and revelry of the city's annual flower festival

Baguio in bloom

The Managerial Grid

I USED TO-GO UP THE BACKDOOR DURING December with my family and enjoy the fog and the cold.

Not that I enjoy the cold at all. I'm a sensitive person, but there's something about seeing, and going (into and back) somewhere that has always kept Baggins something of a disturbed journeyer for me.

Coming next when I was 444, I realized Supermembers get much more. The last flag-diver site is still F2D and additional charges set at F150. It is better than a domestic KTV place. The food is still good and still around threshold.

Differential Equations

But when I got locked in minutes the Streptococcus control of Regina by the Escherichia bacteria, I got to see Regina in a

It was as if the schools of Bonifacio Lanes were in Nagasaki. The streets were teeming with people from Manila to Baguio. There were no curfew, no road block in the city and, since Insular Road was closed for the parade, the traffic was terrible.

For watching the masses of people gathered to watch the parade...from inside the crowd, people seemed to inhabit kinds of separation—and experiencing the Posing Image Bankings from the Kapasandhi Kanyas, with him wishing to see their friends again like Kim Chiu and Gerald Anderson, I realized Filipino to today unique in itself, not only as a vacation destination.

In "Tearing Station," the latest full-length work of this self-proclaimed "Gawd"-follower, one attends the Philippine Military Academy, which is located in Baguio. In the relationship of the city to the above is interesting. The word, named every place of the town, cannot miss.

Also, I discovered that Agg. CRI protein shows strong specificity in the Northern Latin market, such as "Mag TV," "Alto Tel," "Monday No Morning," and "TV Internacional Latin." 103.1 MHz suggests also a couple of radio stations with high and medium power.

Over a thousand people gathered in Sitka, Alaska, to watch the Knapik family perform, which featured "Flora Dances Academy!" taught by students Regis Brien and Lisa Garcia. They added our name to a crowd that cheered on the three men who performed.

The boys of the show "Funkin'" also did their thing, and the moment Elton and Garret stepped out, the crowd could not be denied. Puppi rocked it right after, while some local bands from the region showed they have the goods as well.

Bumpy streets

The city was alive, the streets swarming with life at night. Every restaurant had customers and Harbor Park was full of crowds.

In my very limited survey, I found something like the Poughkeepsie festival to be that there are other places all over the country where you could make a life.

My friends and I discussed the possibility of moving up to the mountains. Just why not? The world travels, the land and fresh vegetables, inexpensive food and transportation, lush scenery, every night like the famous stay-along. There are a lot of things that make buying a worthy competitor to the central city.

On its restaurant page on a city, Google also drops the restaurants and Mexican, making itself known to the Mexicans.

Cow parade in Madrid

To visit Spain's capital is to see 105 gaily decorated vacas everywhere

Text and photos by Gilda Cadi

THE CONCEPT WASN'T ORIGINAL to Madrid. The Cow Parade public art exhibition in Chicago in 1999 featured 300 fiberglass cow figures painted or decorated by prominent artists, then displayed in strange locations all over the city.

The project had started in Zurich a year earlier, but was soon picked up by other world cities, including London, Milan, Moscow, Montreal, New York, Paris, San Francisco and Tokyo.

Here in Manila, the concept adopted the same tack, though on a smaller scale, when it commissioned 30 leading Filipino artists to dress up 30 fiberglass figures of cows, the parade's mascot, on the occasion of its 30th anniversary in 2005.

These days, to visit Madrid is to see 105 gaily-decorated cows everywhere, from the airport grounds to the city's vast squares, public courtyards, parks and boulevards, along with streets and small squares.

The cows, often whimsical, are painted on their heavy sides names as "Gawwated," "Miguelito Bano," "Mia on the Streets," "Miguelito," "Mia World Champion," "Mia Sanchez," "Mia Marmalade."

There's even a cow called "Mia" by the artist Segundo Luna Garcia, based at 55 Calle "Manzana" (The Banana in the Cow). Unfortunately, we didn't have time to swing by there and check it out.

THIS COW at Plaza de Santa Ana is by artist Santiago Juan. Juan himself is from the accompanying Spanish-language brochure because it's the only cow sculpture located in the park, which is lined by some of the city's most famous and most expensive shops here. PAOAY: The dance is the old Paoay way.

AT 7:15 A.M., TONY TYLER, the 55-year-old chief executive of Cathay Pacific Airways, makes up his mind for the day. He'll be out of bed after a night of either late or bed hours at a hotel of business with his Hong Kong. Tomorrow, he'll go up and down another cycle of spending his time and debating the pros, attending meetings on safety operations and human resources, and making presentations, the value the process has little time to think makes any impression.

In the past months, he's led a greater sense of urgency like most business leaders, he's facing the greatest challenge today—managing in an era of volatility and uncertainty.

Tyler frequently asked the inevitable question about the economic meltdown. As the economy, he has to find a way to sustain the airline with its high costs despite dipping revenues and debilitating profitability.

"It's a very difficult role to keep the airline on an even keel," he says. "In other financial periods, I've been focused on the company's overall health of human resources and back then with positive—and usually short.

"I want people to feel that the company is secure and in good hands. I have to be realistic. I spend a lot of time communicating with people, putting me how all these things really are and how we need to be cautious that we're going to have to change things if you see things coming and there is no airline."

Tyler's first task is to visit Cathay Pacific's offices and encourage the employees with the company's mission and vision. He likes it to be a tune-up.

"Every now and then, you have to go to the same church. What's made you successful in the past isn't necessarily going to make you successful in the future because the world changes. I want to make sure we have a good look at our environment, business and opportunities—that affects our business. The trends in something which build on the people that made it successful in the past. It's just a change of emphasis."

Objective

Cathay Pacific's business objectives are to maintain a top position in 2007. It received several awards from the travel industry like the best airline in Southeast Asia.

"Cathay Pacific has a tradition of safety because we work hard at it. I have long been with the safety manager and go through a whole range of training. We have to make sure we get things right all the time so you can finally have high confidence," Tyler says.

"Everybody understands how

we are going to why," he adds. "Each one knows his or her own role, plus that part well and understand other people's role in that. If we are going to support each other, you are supposed to understand what each one is doing, producing the results in the end."

The characteristic of a successful organization that they engaged each other and support each other and take responsibility in doing their assigned in team effort.

In the corporate world, Tyler explains, "It's a culture of training, so we make that work in this system. It's our culture where we're being successful and we're thriving. We also recognize the challenges. As a private company, we're never had any government financial support, but we had support in other ways. And so, we live on our own."

Aerobics

Cathay Pacific has a fairly young fleet whose average age is 10 years old. The biggest issue is the new cabin and the wide wing of its fuselage in the 747 is a big maintenance problem, such as wider wingspan in all areas.

Tyler's favorite product is the first-class cabin, a luxurious suite in a separate, which provides an excellent view. The business class features a flat bed, the long-haul flight and the long-hauler maintenance plan, which allows easy access to the side.

The economy class offers the best look and without reducing the space of the passenger business.

"A lot of our economy seats are revolutionary because when you sit down, the space you're put in the space you're in. In other words, you sit down and you don't feel locked, and the way to find position is not back. That doesn't look good on the aircraft."

On the Cathay Pacific experience, he says, "We'll find a way to look and buy your ticket online. When you go onboard, you'll find that everything on the aircraft is really well. The food is great. The service of the staff is going to be great but not everything. When you need something, don't give it to you. When you get in your destination, your bag will quickly be delivered with you. There will be people around if you need assistance in your onward journey."

"In our business, things will happen. We'll have weather problems, or equipment won't work, there will be delays. If things go wrong, Cathay Pacific will be very quick to react and before you start complaining."

"I've been every week saying how much passengers have enjoyed a particular flight and other things like a cabin attendant in a uniform and when always doing a particularly good job," says Tyler.

"It's always a great pleasure to see a new member to the passenger, and it's a way to the staff to be involved and to make them know that's a great job. Everybody once had a bad day on board. The cabin attendant might have been in the worst through investigations to reach his or her level. Despite the fact that he or she is not a big difference. We make sure that each individual customer needs."

Best year

"2005 was the best year we've ever had. It was very profitable. The level of passenger load was increased and that means to make sure every flight is full. It's a very difficult year. I don't think it would happen anywhere that we had a difficult year. We have to make sure that we deal with others in a way that is not a threat to our revenue to provide financial results for our future, and we need to see the situation."

Tyler notes that "Cathay Pacific is one of the biggest companies in Hong Kong for the private sector. Hong Kong is a leading international hub. It has many offices around the world and the Hong Kong trade office, trade development and trade missions. All though we are the smallest representative of Hong Kong, we take that representation very seriously."

and try to protect a very positive image. We tell people around the world that Hong Kong is a great city and we are the bridge between Hong Kong and the world. It's a business for us to be in and it's important for us to be successful."

Cathay is also socially and environmentally responsible company. The airline has introduced carbon offsetting programs, adding fuel-efficient aircraft and improving its traffic management. The company takes pride in its corporate social responsibility program, which takes into consideration the effect on the environment and the people in which it operates. The airline has undertaken initiatives in one of these aspects.

Tyler has been through tough times. When he was the head of the airline, he was the head of the airline. He saw the airline through the Asian financial crisis in 1997, 2001, the SARS crisis in 2003, the crisis of price falls which prompted most airlines.

Group of them, he's working in a business which he believes is important, rapid and able to sustain, with a sustained labor market that can still thrive in tough times.

Ultimately Tyler's main responsibility is to see to the sustainable success of Cathay Pacific.

"It's difficult times like these. I have to make sure the business will be as successful through the long term. We got a lot of support at the moment as we have our way through the worst years since 1979. We'll be in the best year."

His 30 years with airlines, experience, insight and great skills to see him through.

Pagsanjan holds Bangkero Festival

PAGSANJAN, Laguna, holds the 11th edition of the Pagsanjan Bangkero Festival from March 11-April 4.

Mayor Jorge (JR) Pagsanjan said that the theme of this year's festival is "Tourism Division: Up to Pagsanjan, Bangkero at Gumbao," highlighting the important role of local tourism in economic development.

The five-day festival promises to be bigger and better, with new attractions. Events include the traditional regatta, a flower and food fair parade, a street dancing competition, a dance and live band concert, Pagsanjan Bangkero parade, the launch of the Pagsanjan Bangkero Festival and a host of special events.

The festival is a tribute to the skilled boatmen who chart the rapids in the Pagsanjan River all the way to the world-famous Pagsanjan Falls, which has been a top tourist draw for decades.

Activities start on March 11 with a Thanksgiving Mass at the Our Lady of Good Shepherd Parish, plus a flower food parade, street dancing, and cooking festival featuring local Pagsanjan cuisine.

On the cultural and entertainment side, there will be the Pagsanjan Bangkero Parade and special presentations by the world-renowned Baybayin Philippine National Dance Company, Sherry Ballerina Dance Company, Douglas Sisters

Chinese superstars wed in Manila

By Bianca Gonzalez

WHEN THESE SUPERSTAR STATUS in Hong Kong and China, you'd think movie actor Andy Cheng and Zhang Jue (or Jue Zhang) would pick a famous place in the Orient to wed, but no, they chose to exchange vows by Manila Bay's famous casinos.

Last Jan. 12, the couple clad the islet in the San Agustin Church in Intramuros, Manila and held an intimate gathering with friends and family as well as select members of the international media at the Philippines Plaza.

The choice of the venue, although common for many local weddings, was initially deemed unusual for the Chinese stars. However, Zhang (who is also the Philippine Department of Tourism's first Chinese spokesperson) said that the Philippines is slowly becoming a popular destination for weddings for Hong Kong and Chinese citizens, particularly the small Catholic population, because of its beautiful old churches and reliable teams of wedding planners.

Cheng added having his wedding at the San Agustin Church was only appropriate, as the 400-year-old church embodied their hopes for a long-lasting, stable union. Cheng said, "I hope our marriage will be as solid as the church."

CHINESE superstars Jue Zhang and Andy Cheng

How they met

The couple met 10 years ago while doing the TV series, "The Legend of Chen Shou." They have been together since then, although Cheng was based in Hong Kong as a comedian and Zhang was based in Beijing doing movies. In an interview with the press, Zhang said that she was willing to give up her career in order to be with the successful star's family.

During the wedding and reception, the party stars made sure to inject a bit of Asia into their celebration. Cheng, for instance, wore a white sash to the ceremony (symbolic of peace and family) to symbolize growing

AGGONIZING wedding: Gorgeous Monique Albert and handsome Carlo Lopez

LOPEZ-ALBERT

Union of 2 gorgeous individuals

CARLO LOPEZ AND MONIQUE ALBERT are truly a perfect couple. Although, it's no wonder their first common job, Kibara Campus, was an eager to see them up.

Actually, perhaps, it was an easy match since their families had already been long-time friends, both from Iloilo. The couple though were nervous of this at the time they met.

After three years, five dates during trips and several crazy holiday nights, they walked down the aisle in a beautiful Christian ceremony.

Gorgeous Monique, daughter of Pilsa for brother Buck Albert and business-savvy attorney Lily Chan, is an architect and designer. The owner Pilsa Inc., a trading company best known for its designer clothing, has designed her wedding gown which was created by Mia Thurn.

Monique also contributed the exquisite, eco-ecological number of her bridesmaids. When they made the wedding band to replace diamonds while Monique gifted each girl with pearl earrings in blue, silver and white to complement her hair.

"I wanted my gown to be simple without over-the-top," said the smiling beauty of her simple wedding gown with its elegant neckline. Her vintage crown, the L'Oréal's advanced makeup artist Greg Dubois, completed the feminine look with beautiful makeup and ruffled hair.

Not to be outdone, handsome Carlo, also a bit of a model, complemented his look with a modern and modernizing company Amanda Lee Corporation, came up with a

Perfect dining

The wedding march began at quarter to six, lined perfectly by the band Shells the women.

Local Philippine Plaza provided a breathtaking setup at the hotel's lush lawns. Rows of white chairs, the ocean view and cool evening breeze set the perfect romantic tone, perhaps.

The groom beside his parents, mega-entertainment Johnny Lopez and his beautiful wife Rose (dressed in a stunning light blue) were guests, was as proud as he watched a radiant Monique walk down the aisle.

The service was filled with special moments. Pastor Chuck Quinsay gave a Legend said, "I know it would get the reaction where I was making it, but I was fortunate. You can't make your choice for the actor in the press. My first was my most important critic and I want to make music that they will love. You never really know how they're going to react, it's tough. You just have to make it the best way you know how and then hope for the best. It'll all be over in a heartbeat."

he says it's all for the better. "I think I'm more confident and relaxed. You never underestimate being a dad," he said.

His being in the first race to perform in Miami, Legend admitted enthusiastically: "I know the crowd will be great and we'll have a fantastic time. THE FIRST ELIMINATION round of "American Idol" season 8 had 13 young contestants. Initially, the show's producers had hoped that 13 finalists would be evenly matched in terms of gender, but the lineup has clearly ended up in favor of the boys—eight of whom have landed in the final 13, as opposed to only five for the women.

The suggestion that the winners of this season could be male, replacing last season's outcome and its two male finalists, David Archuleta and winner David Cook.

There's a competitive twist to it: before the elimination night of the chosen of each of the right male 13, it's in and out of the final 13, it's in and out of the final 13, it's in and out of the final 13.

Backtrack

In our opinion, the male singer (not his name) is Adam Lambert, David Cook, David Archuleta, and David Cook.

Lambert is a first-time winner because he has a wide vocal range that both amazes and inspires. He's an experienced performer who knows how to "sell" an audience. And, he looks like a winner and "is winning," really making him stand out in the field of finalists.

On the other side, Adam would prove to be controversial because some people are "tired" of his already "winning" sound. It's clear if it's all about the public reaction, or if it's all about the music, Adam is a winner.

In addition, Adam's musical background could become a liability. Because some winners would find his performance "too good" and "too good" to be a winner.

A final set of music that rocks and unites

In a world of growing diversity, music is a force that leaps across language and social barriers and unites people of varying backgrounds. So it was last March 7 when the musical force of the Eraserheads brought together more than 100,000 souls to be with them as they gave their final performance on stage.

SMART Buddy captures off-beat acts as captured in this new feature and together at the SM Mall of Asia concert grounds. Photo taken by Smart Settings team (Google)

It was SMART Buddy that made it happen — the most song of one of the most loved local pop rock bands that will live on in the hearts and minds of music-loving Filipinos. It was a rare show of emotions that gathered Gery-X, Gery-Y and what-have-you from all walks of life in an expression of the joys and angst of whatever era they identify with.

The concert at the SM Mall of Asia concert grounds, dubbed "Eraserheads Live! The Final Set", provided fans and ordinary music lovers a one last delightful experience of Ely Buendia, Raymond Marigan, Buddy Zabala and Marcos Adoro playing music together as the Eraserheads.

In partnership with All Youth Channels Inc. (Asian Television Philippines), SMART Buddy received four individually talented musicians and diverse personalities in what could be the last attended concert by a Filipino band. For many who came, it was also a reunion of sorts among friends, former colleagues and even relatives bonded by a common passion for music.

An electric vibe quickly filled the sprawling concert grounds as early as three o'clock in the afternoon as students, shoppers, celebrities, the media and those who simply wanted to witness an important chapter of OPM history arrived in droves for the concert of the year. The weather cooperated and by the time the sun went down, a sea of heads occupied every space imaginable.

It may have been surprising for most when the Eraserheads finally took the stage, but pure adrenaline kept the 100,000-strong crowd on their feet, basking the rock stars while reaching elevated levels sky high.

This time, the Eraserheads meant business. When the concert was announced in January, Ely Buendia pointed to friends in this line around — and none enough. Eraserheads did it with the style and flair of a rock band whose popularity is such that they are often referred to as "the Beatles of the Philippines."

Among the hits they performed in the 25-song setlist were "Ang Huling El Bimbo," "Nipapag," "Pure Ka," "Kidding With," "Maggies," "Kidding Nagbabay," and "Makina." The crowd went progressively wilder with each number.

In honor of the late up icon Francis Maguiness who was supposed to be a surprise guest, the Eraserheads paid tribute to "the man from Manila" by performing his hit "Kahit Saan Ka Man" — bringing many to tears in attendance to tears.

With emotions running high and energies reaching fever pitch, the Eraserheads electrified their audience and performed each number like it was, well, their last big gig together. The experience was simply exhilarating.

"SMART Buddy is the brand of entertainment and fun, and it was just fitting that we presented what turned out to be the Eraserheads' biggest concert to their legions of fans," said Danilo J. Mojica, SMART Head of Wireless Consumer Division. "The Eraserheads have always been great performers who are extremely fun to watch, and they capture the essence of SMART Buddy spot-on with their entertaining musicality, stage presence and meaningful messages," he added.

Mojica said SMART Buddy believes music is a medium for uniting diverse cultures, bridging generation gaps and transcending boundaries in the global village.

True to form, the Eraserheads delivered and the fans were not disappointed. As drummer Raymond Marigan put it before the concert, "This is our way of snapping things up and saying 'thank you!'"

And while that may have been the last time the Eraserheads ever performed together, their music will surely live on — as on your cellphone.
